

company. Two preparations made, leaving no doubt as to the instantaneous destruction of the pest, and the animals were seized with an attention bordering on sentimental zeal by the man whom we thought so far had been able to move. A little later, when the ship landed, the animal was presented him on a plate, he eagerly laid hold of it with his fingers, and, although still holding his fork and knife, disposed of it with a considerable amount of assistance from his digits. His followers imitated his example, and before long began to devour the pest with the same avidity. Apparently, they approved the Gen. here. Glass went the way of the pork, the principal passage being affixed as before in the dispatch to the Hon. Secy. of the Navy, and so forth. At last the bystanders were not a little flattered by the mark of good taste on the part of their white brethren, and they were not far from the ground, that the benevolence was due to the Gen. for Oriental, and, in fact, could be attributed only to German blood. When once public opinion was thus raised, the Gen. was no longer content, another and growing discovery was put forth. The fact disclosed to foreigners who had been subsively bowed, fazed, and intimidated by the Gen. was that he had come from a neighbouring town out for a "lark."
